Besides correcting township surveys they will put the finishing touches to the river surveys, and where the latter are not settled upon, or on both sides, conform them to the township surveys.

One of the women taking part was upwards of 100 years of age, and had a number of great grandchildren on the ground.

ASSISTANT Commissioner Herchmer arrived from Calgary on Sunday evening having left the previous Thursday. Went to Fort Saskatchewan on Monday, inspected the premises on Tuesday, saw the force drill and parade on Wednesday and left for Victoria by the north side on Thursday morning, to visit the police posts at Pitt and Battleford and possibly Prince Albert. He was accompanied by chief veterinary surgeon Riddle. The result of the inspection of the post was pronounced satisfactory.

A YOUNG Blackfoot Indian named Jean, who had been brought up at St. Albert mission, was drowned in the Athabasca about July 16th about 50 miles below the Landing. Three of the H. B. York boats were being tracked up stream loaded with fur, six men on the line of each, Jean being on the lead. As they tracked along the beach they came to the mouth of a slough of still water across which they expected to be able to wade. It was deep, however, and shifting their tracking collars from their breasts to their arms they commenced to swim across, Jean leading. They had been heated with tracking and on taking to the cold water were all seized with cramps, and had it not been for the assistance of the boat's crews immediately behind would probably have all been drowned. Five of them, R. Jarvis, C. Stewart, Roger Ferguson, Eli Daignault, and Paul Bisnault were rescued. The body of Jean was found about an hour and a half later, and was buried near the scene of the accident.

J. LAMOURREUX expected to have his new steamboat running to-day. He uses the engine of the old government tug, brought up the Saskatchewan in '76.

AN aerolite fell on the Stony reserve at the Horse Narrows, Lake St. Ann, about 6 o'clock on Sunday evening 17th inst., half a mile from the Indian houses on the reserve and three miles from the H. B. post. The sky was clear at the time, and being in broad day light the aerolite was easily seen by the Indians in the houses. It approached from the east, having the appearance of a small white cloud. While still at a considerable height in the air it burst, with a noise like the firing of cannon and musketry. The report was heard distinctly by Mr. Taylor at the H. B. post three miles distant, who on coming out of the house saw puffs of smoke, such as would be made by gun shots, starting from a common centre in the air where the aerolite exploded. This appearance was also seen by the Indians from their houses. The explosion took place over the shore of the lake and apparently some of the pieces fell into the lake, sending up numerous jets of steam. One of the pieces which fell on the shore, as large as a man's two fists, was picked up by an Indian named Painted Stone, and is valued by him as good medicine. He only asks twenty-five dollars for it. The Indians look upon the fall of the aerolite as a bad sign. It is reported to have been seen passing over St. Albert settlement and also over the Little Devil's lake, twenty miles this side of Lake St. Ann.

EDMONTON BULLETIN, JULY 30, 1887.

THERE seems to be a difference of opinion as to which North-West M. P. did the least for the North-West during the late session of parliament, with an inclination to award the belt to Mr. Davis. True Mr. Davis did not, so far as the parliamentary reports show, afflict the house with a speech, and in so much fell short of his partners. But on the other hand if he said nothing in our favor he as certainly said nothing against us, as the other three found it necessary to do.

WHILE those who oppose railway competition in Manitoba and the North-West are pleasing themselves that it is only the city of Winnipeg with whom they have to deal municipally after municipality throughout the province have passed resolutions endorsing the Red River Valley road and are no doubt prepared to back up sympathy with assistance if necessary. It is strange that men living say two hundred miles from the proposed terminus of this line should take such an active interest in its progress. But yet not so strange when it is remembered that the anti-disallowance agitation of '87 is for the same object as the farmer's union agitation of '84, which only failed then for lack of needed assistance from those who are screaming loudest against disallowance now. What the farmers set themselves to do then Winnipeg is trying to do now. The cause of the farmers' union was just and did not die. The very men who most strongly opposed the farmers in '84 are now the means of carrying out their wishes, and it is the farmers who are making them do it.

SPEAKING of the North-West senatorships the Lethbridge News of a late issue objects to the appointment of any of the candidates defeated in the late election contest, on the ground that their rejection by the people for the house of commons is proof that they are not wanted in the senate. Supposing for the sake of argument that the commons election has anything to do with the senate appointments, the News surely does not ask that the successful commons candidate shall hold both seats. And if he cannot do so why should not the man who received the next highest number of votes in the election contest be considered the next most popular man in the district and receive the senate seat rather than another whose popularity has not been tested and who if it had might and probably would not have received nearly as many votes. If the successful territorial candidates had not turned out such deplorable failures from every point of view, and if the News itself had not been compelled to dissent from the position taken by the candidate which it helped to elect, on the subject of greatest importance to the place in which it is published, adverse criticisms of the defeated candidates would come from it with better grace and more effect.

REV. J. CAMERON has been getting a ride over the C. P. R. at reduced rates and feels it his duty to repay the disinterested kindness of the railway company by giving a slap at that common enemy of mankind, the North-West settler. He has discovered that one of the drawbacks of the country is "that the right kind of settlers have not come in. The fault is not with the soil but the settler; men have come here to speculate, not to farm." This is taken up and approved by the organ of the minister of interior, and no doubt will be echoed and re-echoed by the string of pap-fed liekspittles from Halifax to Victoria and back again. Did the Rev. Cameron ever hear of a certain people who being in a state of bondage were compelled by the king to make bricks, and when they asked for certain rights they were answered by their burdens being increased. And when they complained, the king, Pharaoh, said "Ye are idle, ye are idle. Go therefore now and work; for there shall no straw be given you, yet shall ye deliver the tale of bricks?" The North-West settler pays to keep up the expensive machinery of boodle government in Ottawa, he pays to keep up eastern manufacturers, he pays bonuses to eastern railways, he and he alone has to stand the loss of the bad seasons of which so much capital is now made by certain patriots, and when he demands that which, as essential as straw to the brick-making Israelites, would enable him to make these payments, to combat these drawbacks—low railway rates—even ministers of the gospel shout at him from the window of their palace car as it glides smoothly and swiftly along, "Ye are idle, ye are idle," and the Pharaoh who sits comfortably at Ottawa thunders out, "There shall no straw be given you, yet shall ye deliver the tale of bricks!"

PARTY.

PARTYISM seems to be fast losing its hold in Canada, at least so far as present political parties are concerned. A few years ago the vast majority of the voters ranged themselves as naturally in the ranks of one party or the other and fought the elections, and the intervals between elections as well, as systematically and as determinedly as soldiers. Then elections were either a foregone conclusion, were decided by few straggling votes, or were lost and won respectively by the defection of traitors to the enemy's camp. An appeal to the intelligent judgment of the electors was not thought of. To be a traitor to party then was a most serious offence. The brand was put on, and it stuck, a sign of degradation, acknowledged as such by all. To be a member of one party—and a voter had to be very insignificant if he was not compelled to declare his allegiance to one or the other—was a standing cause of offence to every member of the opposite party. The name of either was used by the members of the opposite one as a term of reproach. Principles were forgotten in the personality of the leaders; in the desire to aggrandize the party itself, and of course the members thereof. The members were not permitted to think individually on pain of being treated as traitors. It was taken for granted that there could be no political idea outside of the two parties and the man who attempted to advance such was considered as a danger to society, a spy from the enemy's camp or a traitor in his own, as the case might be. This extreme unreasoning partyism may or may not have been an unmixed evil; it may have been only the over growth of a good principle; it may or may not have been necessary under the circumstances of the times, but it certainly is rapidly passing out of existence now and the country is not losing by its doing so. The causes may be, that the parties have become rotten with age, or political corruption; that the great leader of the one is dead, and the followers of the other are already quarreling for his shoes; or that having been formed many years ago for the narrow field of provincial politics, and being still controlled by men trained in that field, the country has outgrown them. Questions are arising with which they, as at present constituted, are unable to deal. They are unable to provide a line of thought for the public on these questions, and people consequently are thinking for themselves. True, the late elections were run on party lines in the east; the ministerial sheep are still divided from the opposition goats in the house; but it is not even an open secret that since '84 although the opposition was without the shadow of a policy, the majority from eastern constituencies was only held by wholesale bribery at the rate of one and a half to four millions a year in bonuses to questionable railroad schemes and by other means even less creditable. True, the party organs still enlarge upon the iniquity of their opponents and call each other grit or tory in contempt. They are the same papers and as able writers as those of years ago, but their parties have not that hold on the public mind necessary to make their words bite. The lion is as big as ever and roars as loud, but he is toothless, and the roar of a toothless lion is regarded as little as the bray of an ass. Then to be the organ of a party was a paper's greatest recommendation; now it is anything but that. Then, an independent paper could not exist; now half the leading papers of the country claim to be independent. One proof that partyism is losing its grip is that although ever since confederation both parties have used every wheel in their complex machinery to keep federal and provincial politics within the same lines, the results of the provincial are no guide to those of the federal elections, especially within the last year. The liberals swept Ontario and Nova Scotia and secured majorities in New Brunswick and Quebec in the late provincial elections, yet all these provinces immediately afterwards sent conservative majorities to the federal parliament. Prince Edward Island, which re-elected a conservative legislative assembly sent none but liberals to Ottawa. British Columbia and Manitoba which elected conservative local legislatures and sent only one liberal to Ottawa have declared their independence of party control, and the latter has actually dared the conservative

Ottawa government to mortal combat, backed in doing so by the vast majority of the conservatives of the province. In Ontario now the farming community, irrespective of party, is taking up and discussing—and it is reported approving—the question of commercial union with the States. If this were being attempted a few years ago, how the party terrors would have been let loose, the party whip cracked and the straying sheep driven back into the separate pens with a mark by which they could be known for all time. Now, however, organs of the one party deal with the question rather approvingly, the other rather deprecatingly, both evidently wishing to see which way the public mind leans before committing themselves definitely, and preparing to make whichever jump circumstances may render advisable. In the meantime they are arguing the question on its merits or demerits. This tends towards each individual thinking it out for himself, and thereby to a still greater loosening of party control. Popular government has not been an unlimited success in Canada of late years. The party machine may have been a good machine when it was run for a good purpose. But when it is run, as it has been run lately, simply to continue its own existence, its running is at least a waste of power. The machine that is made to do work cannot run long empty without breaking. The present party machines of Canada are not adapted to the work now required of them, consequently they are either clogged or running empty, and cannot last much longer. Those who are working them had better keep a sharp look out for splinters.

MACKENZIE RIVER.

A party comprising Rev. Mr. Spendlove and two little boys, Mrs. Bompas, and servant H. Richards, arrived from Ft. Simpson Mackenzie river, on Friday July 22nd by way of the Landing. They left Ft. Simpson, 500 miles north of Edmonton and eight degrees west, on June 16th by the H. B. steamer Wrigley, Capt. Smith. The Wrigley had already made a trip from Simpson down the Mackenzie to Good Hope, within the Arctic circle, and back, taking only eight days to traverse a distance which by York boats occupied a month. Coming up the Mackenzie from Simpson they crossed Great Slave lake about June 20th, earlier than it was ever crossed by the H. B. boats before, and reached Ft. Smith on Salt river at the foot of the rapids of Slave river on June 22nd. Here they met Commissioner Wrigley and party, including Dr. McKay of Peace river district and Jas. McDougall of the Athabasca district. The former accompanied the commissioner on the steamer Wrigley to Peel river which comes into one of the mouths of the Mackenzie near the Arctic ocean and from which there is a portage to the head of one of the main branches of the Yukon river. Peel river is the most northerly of the H. B. Co. posts and does an Esquimaux as well as an Indian trade. The commissioner was expected to reach Ft. Smith returning about July 11th. The party crossed the portage from Ft. Smith to the landing above the rapids, a distance of fifteen miles during the night of the 22nd on horseback, and started south on the Grahame, Capt. Segers, next morning. The Grahame reached Chipewyan on the 24th and McMurray on the 25th. The party left McMurray on the 27th and were over the Grand Rapids on July 5th. Jas. McDougall accompanied them to the head of the rapids and then returned with Capt. Bell and party to take the Grahame and proceed to Ft. Smith to meet Mr. Wrigley.

The diocese of Mackenzie river with which this mission party is connected includes the basin of the Mackenzie from Ft. Smith to the Arctic, extending from the Rocky mountains on the west to the barren grounds of Hudson's bay on the east, and also including the Yukon country, in Canadian territory, on the west side of the mountains, an area of about 800 miles square, having a total population of perhaps 5,000. The Indians in the Mackenzie basin under the various names of Slaves, Dog-ribs, Hares, Montagnais, etc., are branches of the Chipewyan race and speak dialects of that impossible language. The Yukon Indians are an entirely different race, much more intelligent and have a language not so difficult to master. No missions have yet been established among the Esquimaux along the Arctic coast, but Rev. Mr. Canem who is stationed at Peel river and was appointed to that work some time ago, but whom adverse circumstances prevented from taking it up, is studying their language for future use in the work of their christianization. Bishop Bompas and Rev. Mr. Spendlove have acquired the Chipewyan language and have made considerable progress in translating the Bible into it, using the syllabic character. Archdeacon Macdonald has acquired the language of the Yukons and is engaged in a similar service for their benefit, using the Roman letter. At every mission station a school is held at which the Indian children are taught by the missionary or his wife. Although the Indian language proper is so difficult to learn there is a sort of Chinook in general use in which whites and Indians can converse with each other. Ft. Simpson is the head of the diocese but the bishop seldom resides there, preferring to move about from mission to mission, which, the distances being so great, occupies all his time. Rev. Mr. Spendlove was in charge of the Ft. Simpson mission during the bishop's absence, and one of two missionaries now on the way out will have charge during his year's absence in England, the other to take charge of the mission at Ft. Laird at present unoccupied. There are also two lay assistants at Ft. Simpson. Rev. Mr. Garton is at Ft. Rae on the northern arm of Great Slave lake, Rev. D. M. Kirkby is at Ft. Norman at the outlet to the Mackenzie of Great Bear lake, Allan Hardisty, native catechist, is at Ft. Wrigley, an outpost of Ft. Norman up the Mackenzie, Archdeacon Macdonald has headquarters at Peel river, but travels throughout the Yukon country, Mr. Wallace, ordained deacon, is at Rampart house on the Yukon, and Mr. Ellington, ordained deacon, is stationed elsewhere on the Yukon. Mrs. Spendlove remains during her husband's absence at Ft. Resolution at the outlet to Great Slave lake, where she teaches school. The Roman Catholic church is also pushing mission work in the Mackenzie river country. An additional school teacher and lay assistant are with Capt. Bell's party on the way to the Mackenzie diocese.

Last winter was not extraordinary in the matter of weather, and there was rather less snow than usual, but it was marked by a most unusual disappearance of both rabbits and reindeer, the main sources of the food supply of both Indians and whites. Heretofore if one of these was scarce the other was plentiful, but last winter both unaccountably failed. There was considerable hunger among the Indians in consequence and some actual starvation, and a comparatively poor fur hunt was made. Even in the forts a scarcity was felt and during a great part of the winter the residents of Ft. Simpson were on half rations. Mr. Spendlove found the small quantity of barley and potatoes which he grew the previous summer a great help in eking out the scanty rations procurable. Moose appeared to be scarce as well as deer and rabbits. The Mackenzie closes at Ft. Simpson about the 10th of October and is opened by the Liard about the middle of May. It is a mile and a quarter wide at the fort and deep as well. Mr. Spendlove has grown barley, potatoes and the hardy garden vegetables at Ft. Simpson during his eight years residence there, but the country being timbered and marshy is not generally suited for farming, and the latitude, 62 north, is a little too high. The resources of the country are its fur, which is plentiful everywhere, the fisheries of its lakes, which are inexhaustible, its timber, which is abundant and of excellent quality, and its minerals—known to be in immense quantities, petroleum, salt and coal, and believed to exist also in immense quantities, copper, silver and gold.

Two marriages took place at Ft. Simpson during the winter, Chas. Christie and F. Heron of the H. B. Co. to two native women. The general health of the people during the winter was good. A death occurred during the cold weather by one of the H. B. men losing his way in the evening. He was found next morning frozen to death. The whooping cough is spreading north this spring and ten children had died of it at Ft. Simpson before Mr. Spendlove left. Henry Richards, servant of Mrs. Bompas, lost several of the fingers of one hand by the bursting of a gun when out shooting. One of the great drawbacks to mission life on the Mackenzie, besides occasional scarcity of food, is the infrequent mail communication. Three or four years ago the mail arrived only twice a year, once by dog train in March, and once by boat in September. Frequently newspapers could not be taken by the dog train and had to lie over for the boats, making them upwards of a year old by the time they reached their destination. During the past two years there have been from two to three mails in the summer and one in the winter, and with steamboat communication established they may be still more frequent. The only mail is of course carried by the H. B. Co. who thus keep up communication between their posts, and convey mail for the missionaries free of charge. A government mail say once in two months to Chipewyan and once in three months to Ft. Simpson—or more frequently if possible—would be a great assistance to the missionaries and would be eagerly welcomed by them. It would also be a practical recognition of the value of their work in preparing the Indians for the inevitable advance of civilization.

REV. W. MCKAY has resigned the position of Indian agent at Battleford. No doubt Mr. McKay was a most capable agent, no doubt he transacted the business of the agency in a most capable manner, and had he not been an ordained minister of a recognized church, it would no doubt have been in the public interest that he should have continued in the position. Circumstances occasionally arise in which it is advisable for those who have devoted themselves specially to the spread of the gospel to step outside of that field. When they do so in any but exceptional circumstances the ultimate results are not generally such as are desirable. There were no exceptional circumstances making the appointment of an ordained minister to the Battleford Indian agency necessary. The severance of the connection thus established can only be regarded with favor, and it is to be hoped that the precedent of the appointment will not be followed.

THE MAIL says the contracts for furnishing provisions to the mounted police for one year from July 1st '87 has been awarded to the following firms: Regina—beef, Mowat Bros.; other articles, Hudson Bay Co. Maple Creek—beef, Boright & Parsons; other articles, Hudson Bay Co. Medicine Hat—beef, I. G. Baker & Co.; other articles, H. B. Co. Fort MacLeod—Hudson Bay Co. Lethbridge—Hudson Bay Co. Calgary—beef, I. G. Baker & Co.; other articles, Hudson Bay Co. Edmonton—I. G. Baker & Co. Ft. Saskatchewan—I. G. Baker & Co. Battleford—beef, P. Gallagher & Sons; other articles Hudson Bay Co. Prince Albert—Hudson Bay Co.

Van Horne of the C. P. R. recently stated in Victoria, B. C., that the Northern Pacific had offered to withdraw from competition with the C. P. R. in British Columbia if the latter would withdraw from competition with it on Puget Sound. The vice-president of the Northern Pacific writes that there is no truth in Van Horne's statement.

Twelve families from Montana settled on Lee's creek, south-west of Macleod this season. There are 60 families in that locality now.

A niece of James Cleghorn of Winnipeg, twelve years of age, is heir-prospective to the throne of the Sandwich islands, in case of the present king being dethroned by the revolutionists now in power.

There has been trouble at Lethbridge with miners brought from Ohio to replace the men locked out some time ago. Sixty police were taken from Ft. MacLeod, but nothing serious had happened at last accounts.

The sub contracts for grading the Red River Valley railway were let on July 14th, the work to be completed on August 31st. Egan Bros. have 25, Stravil 19, Irvine 7 and Bryson 14 miles.

A reunion of the 1st expedition men took place in Winnipeg on July 14th. The dinner was in the Union hotel. A letter from Lord Wolseley was read wishing success to the proposed association.

Messrs. Daly and Scarth were banqueted lately by the conservatives of Brandon. There don't seem to be enough conservatives left in Winnipeg to banquet Mr. Scarth. The Brandon banquet was simply a weak attempt to offset the Watson banquet in Winnipeg.

Baird, who held the seat for Queen's county, N. B., during the past session of parliament, has resigned. Baird had a minority of some forty votes but was declared elected by the returning officer and was maintained in his seat by the government majority during the session.

Winnipeg Sun: Mr. D. H. Macdowall of Prince Albert and M. P. for Saskatchewan, has sustained a sad bereavement in the death of his infant and only son, who arrived from Scotland during the latter part of last week and expired at Dr. Blanchard's residence Saturday night.

The programme of the North-West visit of the minister of interior is: Proceed to British Columbia by the C. P. R. direct. Returning east stop at Kamloops, Banff and Calgary. Swift Current, go north to Battleford and return direct. Visit south-eastern Assiniboia and spend several days in Winnipeg.

There has been a change of ministry in the Sandwich islands. Walter M. Gibson has been replaced as prime minister by Wm. S. Green. The means used to bring about the resignation of late ministry were forcible rather than strictly constitutional; the new premier being named by the people, not the king.

The banquet in honor of Robert Watson, M. P. for Marquette, given in Winnipeg on July 7th, was a great success. W. Heppeler was chairman, and Messrs. J. M. Ashdown, R. J. Whittle, Alex. McDonald, G. F. Carruthers and S. D. Rowbotham vice chairmen. An address and purse of $600 was presented to Mr. Watson.

Archbishop Seigers, Roman Catholic missionary to the Yukon Indians, was murdered in November last by his only companion, Frank Fuller, at a point on the Yukon about 500 miles from its mouth. The murderer is in custody at Sitka and will be tried there. He is believed to be insane. The archbishop was a native of Belgium and was thirty-nine years of age.

A pamphlet on the manufacture, consumption and production of iron, steel and coal in Canada, by James Herbert Bartlett, published by Dawson Bros. Montreal and doubtless paid for by the Canadian government, was received by last mail. It is put in evidence in support of the new iron duties. The information contained is interesting and valuable, but is not conclusive in favor of a high tariff on iron.

Free Press interview: "During his three years' trip Mr. Tyrrell also examined into the gold deposits of the Saskatchewan, and definitely determined that the origin was not at the source of the river in the mountains, but that it was washed out of the soft clays and sandstone found along the banks of the river. Every freshet breaks down the rocks into the river, separating the gold and leaving it on the bars, carries the lighter material down stream. The gold, however, does not exist in very great quantity, but is found particularly after every freshet."

The annual report of the department of militia and defence arrived by last mail. The ordinary expenditure for the year ending June 30th '86 was $1,178,659, and the expenditure in connection with the rebellion in the North-West in '85 was $2,851,895. The regular forces consisting of A, B and C batteries and the cavalry and infantry schools required $350,000. The number of volunteer militia enrolled is 37,000, but Gen. Middleton thinks this is an over estimate. The expenditure for pensions on account of the rebellion of '85 was $6,805, and the number of pensioners 51, which has since been increased.

Cash subsidies to the amount of two and a half million dollars were voted during the last hours of the late session of parliament towards the construction of railways in the eastern provinces for a length of 538 miles. To furnish this money the North-West is mortgaged as well as the provinces receiving the benefit. But although the construction of 500 miles of railway in the North-West under proper circumstances would be of vastly greater advantage to Canada than the construction of the roads so bonused, not a cent has been voted for that purpose. There is just one way of accounting for the difference. In eastern Canada it was necessary to bribe the people to support the present ministry, and this two and a half million dollars is a part of the price which Canada has to pay to keep Sir John A. Macdonald in office. The people of the North-West sold themselves for nothing—and they got their price.
